Quarterly manager commentary (as of 9/30/21)

Market sentiment cooled as a variety of risk factors weighted on re-opening momentum. The Delta variant placed a governor on near term growth and contributed to supply bottlenecks. Central bankers began removing accommodation considering the recovery to date and inflation pressures. While the rate of acceleration of global growth may have slowed, the overall level remains healthy. Against this backdrop, the portfolio’s holdings of Commercial Mortgage-Backed Securities posted a quarterly return of 1.84% while global real estate securities were up 1.80% (return figures reported on a gross, unlevered basis).

Commercial real estate fundamentals continued to show signs of improvement as a recovery in economic activity, tenant credit, and the longer-term growth outlook continued to attract investors. The dispersion of property-specific fundamental drivers is evolving but remains heightened; winners and losers will emerge over time as operators adapt to these trends. Overall demand for commercial real estate exposure remained intact but pockets of weakness emerged in part due to a volatile interest rate outlook.

A continuation of economic growth will benefit real estate fundamentals overall, however property level performance and security selection are highly relevant at this point in the recovery. Monetary policy developments, inflation, interest rates, and the pace of job growth are significant variables. The absolute yield profile of real estate remains supportive as the hunt for yield persists and investors search for alternative credit exposures.

Therefore, before investing you should carefully consider the risks that you assume when you invest in the Fund’s common shares. The Fund’s net asset value will vary and its distribution rate may vary and both may be affected by numerous factors, including changes in the market spread over a specified benchmark, market interest rates and performance of the broader equity markets. Fluctuations in net asset value may be magnified as a result of the Fund’s use of leverage. Shares of closed-end investment companies may be greater for investors expecting to sell their shares in a relatively short period after completion of the initial public offering. For further discussion of these and additional risks associated with an investment in the Fund see the Prospectus.
